Rising Sun Press Works. Hardcover. Book Condition: New. Hardcover. 418 pages. Dimensions: 8.6in. x 5.7in. x 1.4in. According to the coal company, young activist and mother Henrietta Owens is a social terrorist in a hijacked plane hurtling toward them with a vengeance. Jack Daltons world faces imminent implosion. His boss screams, Kill her! But theres just one problem: every word she says is true . . . and people know it. Henrietta, with her baby in her arms, shakes the nation awake with some tough-loving truth about coal, climate change, and the future of humanity. Corporate lawyer Jack Daltons morality and career collide as a showdown with Henrietta becomes inevitable. The stakes are high: life, death, the extinction of humanity. Jacks wife crosses the line of loyalty, his daughter lectures him on heroism, the Appalachians foment a revolution, and the ghost of John Henry shows up to haunt him. The climate change countdown is ticking. Political pressures heat up. The sleeping giant of the common man awakens with a roar. One question hammers in Jacks ears: what are you going to do Steam Drills, Treadmills and Shooting Stars sings the anthem of our times, celebrating the everyday hero, and rallying us...
