It s just like stepping suddenly into a strange country. I am glad we came even if we decide not to go into the business. The speaker, a sturdy, manly-looking boy of eighteen, was one of a party of four persons who were strolling along a street in the Greek section of Tarpon Springs, a small Florida town, located on the Anclote River, a few miles from the Gulf of Mexico. His companions were a boy about his own age but of less robust appearance, a little negro lad with a good- humored intelligent face, and a middle-aged, heavily-bearded, blue-eyed man whose tattooed arms and rolling gait told of a life spent on tossing seas and whose confident bearing and air of authority stamped him as one above the rank of a common sailor. Those who have followed The Boy Chums through their many adventures will recognize in the little party their old friends Charley West, Walter Hazard, Captain Westfield and the Bahama lad, Chris, who lately returned from a perilous trip along the Atlantic beach searching for wreckage, and now seeking some promising venture in which to invest the Fifteen Hundred Dollars they earned on that voyage. You re right, Charley, agreed the other boy. I didn t know before that there was a sight like this in Florida. Here s a bench. Let s set down and rest a bit. I am tired from walking. Golly, I reckon dis nigger s tired some too, chimed in the little darkey, I se dun had de toothache in mah legs for most an hour, but I se had to keep up wid you-alls. Don t dare let...
