Excerpt: . . . within the kitchen, as soon as I rose, the pigs made my Levee. On the 24th I crossed over to Eestrevor, where Alderman Eoss late Lord Mayor of Dublin has a small house pleasantly situated under the hills, which are covered with wood, near an old Mansion house in which his Father bVd: I went to pay him a visit, but being early in the morning he was not risen: I went on to the West for near two miles and then turned to the North East along the side of the hills over a rivulet, which joins another and falls in at Newry; before I came to eight mile bridge a fine view presented of the Country to the North of beautiful hills under corn, mostly oats in fine verdure, and on one of them saw a Mount, called the White Mote. Asking here about the road, if it was hilly they told me it was; but that the hills were all level, by which I suppose they meant that they were not high. I came over the hills to Briansford, on the side of Tullamore park, which belongs to Lord Limerick; this park is a very fine situation, being divided into two parts by a rivlet which runs in a deep rocky bed covered with trees, and affords a most Eomantic prospect, to this rivlet there is a gentle descent; on the other side the Park takes in for a mile the...
